Federal and Estimated State and Local Revenues and Expenditures for General Government, Fiscal Year 1938

Total 1938 Transactions

During the fiscal year 1938 combined Federal and estimated State and local expenditures for general government, exclusive of debt retirement, amounted to $17,470,000,000.[1] Of this total, $1,005,000,000 consisted of net additions to social security reserves. The Federal Government accounted for $7,626,000,000, state governments for $4,223,000,000 and local governments for $5,621,000,000 of expenditures. Inclusive of debt retirement, total general governmental disbursements aggregated $18,199,000,000.

To pay for all general governmental disbursements, taxes are estimated to have furnished $14,811,000,000, non-tax revenues $1,181,000,000, borrowings $1,869,000,000 and reductions in general fund balances $338,000,000. Of the total $15,992,000,000 revenue, the Federal Government collected $6,242,000,000, the states collected $4,202,000,000 and local governments $5,548,000,000. These and the corresponding data for fiscal year 1932 are presented in Table 1.

[1] The term 'general government' as here employed excludes trust and investment fund operations, public utilities and other public service enterprises, unless these activities incurred deficits paid from general governmental funds. In such cases the amount of the deficits is included with and reported as a general governmental expenditure.

Sources of Tax Revenue

It is estimated that total Federal, state and local tax collections in the fiscal year 1938 amounted to $14,811,000,000. This represented $114.09 per capita and amounted to 21.8 percent of the average of the estimated national income for calendar years 1937 and 1938.

The most important single source of tax revenue in the United States is the property tax. In 1938 this tax is estimated to have produced $4,745,000,000, not including special assessments. Taxes on corporate income and corporate privilege and taxes on personal income were the next largest revenue producers. The corporation taxes, which included the net income, the capital stock and other corporate franchise taxes, produced $1,762,000,000. The individual income tax yielded $1,562,000,000. Automotive taxes, the liquor-tobacco group and taxes on payrolls each produced close to $1,500,000,000.

For the Federal Government, the three most important sources of current revenue were the taxes on corporation income and privilege, on individual income, and on liquor and tobacco. Collections in 1938 from each of these three sources exceeded a billion dollars. For state governments, the automotive taxes were by far the most important. In 1938 this group, including motor fuel taxes, motor vehicle registration fees, and drivers' licenses (excluding the personal property taxes on automobiles) yielded a total of $1,163,000,000. Next in importance was the sales and other excise group, which produced $717,000,000. In addition to the general sales taxes, this category includes the special taxes on amusements, soft drinks, utilities, oleomargarine, chain stores, severance of natural resources, stock transfers, as well as a large variety of business licenses. The predominant source of local revenue is the property tax. In 1938 this tax yielded $4,531,000,000. Occasional local general sales taxes and widely utilized local licenses yielded an estimated revenue of $302,000,000.

The extent to which the various tax sources were utilized by the Federal, state and local governments during the fiscal year 1938 is summarized in Table 2.

Purposes of Expenditures[2]

Some public funds are twice disbursed, once in the form of grants or loans to other governmental units and again by the receiving units for specific governmental functions. In fewer instances, the same funds are disbursed three times. To avoid multiple counting, the expenditure data for fiscal year 1938 are here shown on two bases. (See Table 3.) The first includes expenditures from the various governments' own sources and, therefore, does not include those expenditures which were financed from sums received from other units in the form of grants, loans, or shared taxes. Transfers to other units are counted as expenditures of the granting or lending unit. The alternative grouping of expenditures reports the various governments' expenditures for their own functions without regard to the origin of the funds. It, therefore, excludes all funds not spent directly but transferred to other units in the form of grants, loans, or shared taxes. The combined totals for all governments are, of course, identical under the two classifications.

The most important expenditure category for all American governments in the fiscal year 1938 was relief, welfare, and social security. It accounted for an estimated $3,085,000,000. This includes funds expended for work relief programs which in part were devoted to highways, public buildings, and other functional purposes. Net additions to social security reserves amounted to an additional $1,005,000,000. Next in importance came education, highways and streets, interest, and national defense, including payments to war veterans and their dependents. The Federal Government's expenditures from its own sources (not including debt retirement) amounted to $7,626,000,000. The corresponding estimated state and local totals respectively were $4,223,000,000 and $5,621,000,000.[3]

[2] The classification of expenditures here used varies from and is not as detailed as classifications employed in the reports of the Bureau of the Census and elsewhere. The differences are necessitated by the inadequacy of the data available for estimating purposes. The class "all other" comprises the aggregate of all the unclassified expenditures.

[3] The term "debt retirement," as here used, refers not to the principal value of bonds canceled or paid off but to the budgetary payments into sinking funds and for retirements of serial bonds and notes with a maturity in excess of one year.

In the case of the Federal Government, the most important single expenditure was for relief, welfare and social security. The largest state expenditure was for highways, while the largest single local expenditure was for education.

In 1938, an estimated $2,237,000,000 was transferred among the various public divisions. For the sake of brevity, these transfers are termed "grants," although they include, in addition to grants, state-administered taxes shared with local units and Federal loans. It should be specifically noted that Federal relief and recovery expenditures for work relief programs under the Works Progress Administration are considered direct Federal expenditures and not grants. These sums were disbursed directly by the Federal Government without clearance through state and local treasuries.

Federal expenditures in the form of grants to state governments amounted to $633,000,000; those to local governments amounted to $172,000,000. The bulk of these totals was accounted for by grants for education, highways, and public welfare purposes. State transfers to local units, mostly for these same purposes are estimated to have amounted to $1,400,000,000. Local payments to states, comprising sums advanced locally for state highway construction and state public assistance programs, amounted to $32,000,000.

In view of the numerous transfers from the Federal Government to state and local governments and from state governments to local governments, the division of total governmental expenditures among the three governmental levels, after adjustment for these transfers, differs substantially from the division on the basis of expenditures from the various governments' own sources. In 1938, after adjustment for intergovernmental transfers, local expenditures were more than twice as large as state expenditures and exceeded Federal expenditures by approximately $300,000,000. (For the details see Table 3.)

Note on sources utilized: The sources of information utilized included published reports of the United States Government, unpublished data from Federal departments administering grants to states and localities, published and unpublished reports of Federal research agencies, and reports of private research agencies.

The statistics of Federal receipts and expenditures were derived from the Annual Reports of the Secretary of the Treasury for fiscal years 1932 and 1938. State and local statistics for 1932 were obtained from Bureau of the Census, Financial Statistics of State and Local Governments, 1932. State tax and revenue statistics for 1938 were obtained from the U. S. Office of Education, U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, the Tax Policy League, and the Distilled Spirits Institute. Local tax and revenue statistics were estimated on the basis of the financial reports of a number of local units which, in 1932, accounted for more than one-third of the total local revenue in the United States. The Bureau of the Census annual reports of Financial Statistics of Cities and the comparative city tax rates, prepared annually by the Detroit Bureau of Governmental Research, afforded a means for verifying the estimates. Data on state and local borrowings, interest, and debt retirement were derived from the Treasury Department's annual compilations of tax-exempt securities. State and local functional expenditures were initially estimated on the basis of the Bureau of the Census' reports for 1937. For the three most important categories, (1) education, (2) highways and streets, and (3) relief, welfare and social security, expenditure statistics for 1938 were obtained from other Federal departments.

For purposes of estimating total state and local expenditures, it was assumed that expenditures amounted to the sum of (1) current revenue collections, (2) depletion of general fund balances, and (3) the net excess of bond issues over bond retirements. In 1938 the Federal Government depleted its general fund balances by $338,000,000. It was assumed that states and local governments made no important use of balances. Such changes as occurred in the balances of state and local units in the course of the fiscal year are believed to have neutralized one another.
